

EARLY MORNING WRECK!

No. 1 of the C. and O. in the Ditch at Indian Run.

ROADMASTER STOUT KILLED.

Nearly All the Train Crew and Several Passengers Injured.

ENGINE COMPLETE WRECK

About 4:30 this morning the West bound F. V. Y. was wrecked at Indian Run, some 40 miles East of this city. The train was moving at its accustomed speed, when without warning the crash came.

The engine and all the cars left the track and plunged into a ditch, saving the two sleepers, which left rails but remained on the roadway.

The only fatality was that of A. G. Stout, Roadmaster between Cincinnati and Russell, who was killed instantly. Mr. Stout's home is at Russell.

All the train crew, with the exception of the Conductor, was more or less injured, none dangerously, however.

Several passengers who were in the day coaches sustained cuts and bruises, but none of a serious nature.

Engine No. 66 and the Postal Car are a complete wreck.

The track was torn up the length of 17 rails, or 510 feet, and it is a mystery how so many escaped immediate death. The cause of the accident could not be learned.

This is, we believe, the first serious casualty to a passenger train on this road, and it may be ascribed to the superior equipment of the cars that it was not more fatal in its results.

All the injured are being cared for by the Company's Surgeons.

London Mail. The American Constitution has been called a system of checks. So in American life. When you want to travel you give your luggage to the porter of your hotel, and he gives you a check in return. At the station you reclaim it with the check and pass it in at a counter and receive another check. As you approach your destination another functionary comes along the train, takes your check and gives you another check in its place. He fishes out your luggage and conveys it to your hotel—for a consideration. You have left your third and last check at the office of the hotel when you enter it, and thence it is delivered up on receipt of the luggage.

At first you bless this arrangement as the salvation of the traveler. After a few weeks of it the tyranny of the check becomes so galling that you begin to long for the fine old English method of dumping down your goods in front of a porter and leaving them to find the way themselves. You would even hail it as a personal triumph if some of your luggage would get lost. But it never does. Sometimes it arrives late, but it always arrives.

Yet it seldom arrives in the shape in which it started, if that is any consolation. They who have to do with luggage see to that. You very soon discover why Americans carry their goods in irascible trunks, and why it is madness for anybody to do anything else. I started out, like an idiot, with a new leather portmanteau. They ripped the stout brass lock off the first week—not for plunder, apparently, but simply because it is the tradition of the service. They punched it and kicked and clanked on it. In softer hours, when literary inspiration came, they wrote on it. My portmanteau today is an epitome of the political sentiment of the United States from New York to San Francisco. As a historical document it is beyond price, and I am contemplating the gift of it to the Library of Congress at Washington. As a portmanteau it has both feet in the grave.

The system of checks is not confined to travelers' luggage. The Conductor of the train passes carefully to and fro asking for your ticket and giving you a check in return, or asking for your check and returning your ticket. If you hand your stick to a boy in hotel while you write your name in the register, he dashes off and returns away in some secret place and totters triumphant with a check. In the very hotel bar, when you buy sevenpence halfpenny of whisky you get a check and walk two yards across the bar to pay at a desk.

But the portmanteau of the check is at Niagara. When you go down to the Cave of the Winds, you strip off all your clothes and leave them, well as your valuables, in a tin box with the attendant. Then you go down to battle with the cataract attired only in a suit of pyjamas, a suit of ulsters and a check lashed around your neck and rising and falling with the beating of your heart. No wonder the American speaks of death as "hanging in his checks." It is only by death that he can rid himself of them.

Was Installed Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Bristol, Tenn.

Rev. W. O. Cochrane, formerly of this city and Pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, after a service of four years here, accepted a call to the First Presbyterian Church at Bristol, Tenn., and was installed as Pastor of that Church Sunday, February 14th. The Bristol Daily News has this to say of the installation ceremonies:

With a service of unusual beauty and solemnity the Rev. W. O. Cochrane was yesterday morning installed Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Bristol, Tenn. The large edifice was well filled with a large and intelligent congregation to witness the impressive ceremonies.

On Saturday evening at 8 o'clock Holston Presbytery met in the basement of the Church and received Rev. W. O. Cochrane on certificate from Ebenezer Presbytery of Kentucky, and the call from the First Presbyterian Church of Bristol for the services of Rev. W. O. Cochrane having been considered in proper form, the same was placed in his hands, and having been accepted by him, the Presbytery appointed a commission to install him as Pastor of the said Church as follows: Rev. J. R. Herndon to preach the sermon, Rev. J. C. Carson to charge the Pastor, and Rev. J. G. McFerrin to charge the congregation, and the installation service was directed to take place in the Church yesterday at 11 o'clock.

The service was a very impressive and instructive one. Rev. J. C. Carson then proceeded to charge the Pastor, and Rev. J. G. McFerrin charged the congregation; both of these charges were full of good and wholesome instruction for both Pastor and people, and were delivered with good effect. At the close of the service the members of the congregation came forward, with the shaking of hands, and expressions of kind words, gave strong assurance of their love for their new Pastor, and of their determination to hold up his hands and help him in the important work he has entered into. This Church now starts out afresh upon its work with a Pastor full of the spirit of God, and zealous for the success of His cause, while the people are united and ready now to "go forward." May the blessings of Almighty God rest upon them and their labors.

EXTRA SESSION.

Congress Will Be Reconvened Monday, March 15.

McKinley Decides That the Revenue Must Be Increased.

He Believes the Revenue Lies in an Immediate Adjustment of the Tariff—No Other Business Expected to Be Transacted at the Extra Session.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—Before William McKinley shall have been 24 hours he will call a special session of congress for Monday, March 15. His object is to provide without delay a sufficient income to pay the running expenses of the country. That will be his first aim, and everything else for the time being will be of secondary importance, no matter what its nature may be.

The president-elect believes the present financial condition of the government will call for a radical change on the part of his administration, and he has decided that the remedy lies in an immediate adjustment of the tariff. In his proclamation calling for an extra session he will so declare and will urge congress to enact a new tariff law.

Until this legislation shall have been enacted, to the satisfaction of the president, there will be no more appointments to office that are absolutely necessary to place the machinery of the new administration in motion.

Callers of prominence enjoy the confidence of the president—have been informed of the above intentions of Maj. McKinley. Chairman Hanna and John Sherman were consulted regarding this policy and they both agreed that it is the proper programme to pursue. The president-elect and intentions of the president-elect will be conveyed to the republican senators and congressmen. Chairman Hanna, whether the latter shall succeed Senator Sherman or not.

Should Hanna be appointed by Gov. Bushnell he will at once assume and be accorded the leadership in the tariff work, and should he not be appointed he will be conveyed to the president to see that the views of Maj. McKinley on the tariff are framed into law. Senators and congressmen who have business at the white house in connection with appointments to office will be prevailed upon to postpone such matters until congress shall have accomplished the work for which the president will call it in extraordinary session.

MARK HANNA

Will Succeed Sherman—This is Official.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 22.—Gov. Bushnell furnished the following statement to the United Associated Press Sunday evening:

"It had not been my intention to make any announcement in relation to the action I would take in the matter of appointment to fill the prospective vacancy in the Ohio senate in relation to the United States senate until the vacancy actually existed. But on account of the manifest interest in the people and their desire to know what will be done, I deem it best now to make the following statement: When Senator Sherman resigns to enter the cabinet of President McKinley, I will appoint to succeed him Hon. Marcus Hanna of Cuyahoga county, to serve until his successor is chosen by the Seventy-third general assembly of the state. I trust this action will meet with the approval of the people."

(Signed) ASA R. BURNELL.

CLEVELAND, O., Feb. 22.—Mark Hanna was shown the United Associated Presses dispatch from Columbus Sunday night announcing that Gov. Bushnell would appoint him U. S. senator to fill Senator Sherman's unexpired term. The national chairman refused to believe the report, saying he did not doubt the authenticity of the telegram, but "I haven't received any official communication from the governor or anyone else, so you will have to excuse me from discussing the matter, as I am not permitted until the official appointment does come."

THE POWERS

Bombard the Position of the Insurgents, Near Canea.

British Vessels Fire Forty Shells and Other Vessels About Thirty.

The Christians Abandoned Fort Voukots and Bled It Up With Dynamite—The Insurgents Fled to the Mountains.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—A dispatch from Athens to the Central News says that the fleets of the powers Sunday night bombarded the insurgent positions in the vicinity of Canea. No details of the bombardment are given.

CANEA, Feb. 22.—It has been learned that the ultimatum of the admirals to Col. Vassos was against his attacking Canea. It apparently did not forbid him from marching into the interior of one island where Col. Vassos proposes to occupy several strategic points. Our report states that the ultimatum declared that if the Greek troops or insurgents approach any point in the Canea district, the fleets will shell them, but if they are quiet they would be permitted to land food.

Col. Vassos replied that he did not intend to attack Canea or the flags of the powers. He would remain on the defensive unless he was attacked. Notwithstanding this assurance fighting took place Sunday on the hills to the east of the town. The combatants were the Greek Christians and the Mussulmans, who were in plain view from the ships in the harbor. The reply of the Mussulmans to the Christians' fire was very feeble and it could easily be seen that they could be compelled to abandon their positions if the Christians pressed them. Their gun practice was so very poor that it excited ridicule on board the ships.

The main position of the Christians was in a hamlet on the ridge of the hills, where they had hoisted the flag of Greece. This position was about 4,000 yards from the harbor. At 4:30 the flagship displayed signals for the Dryad, Harrier and Revenge, and a vessel called the Italian, German and Russian squadrons to open fire on the Cretan position. The order was quickly complied with. The Christians' position was shelled and the other vessels about thirty. The aim of the gunners was very good, and it was evident that the position of the insurgents was becoming untenable. In about ten minutes the Greek flag was hoisted down and as soon as it disappeared the order "cease firing" was given and the guns of the fleet immediately became silent. Thereupon the flag was again hoisted on its staff. The rocks in the vicinity were covered with Cretan soldiers, and the Mussulmans, encouraged and emboldened by the assistance that had been given to them by the fleets of Christian Europe, now began a lively fighting on the Cretons who were engaged in removing their wounded. The Christians, who were evidently dispirited by the action of the fleet, and made no attempt to return the fire.

The action of the foreign warships has caused the deepest indignation here and the supporters of the Sultan are bitterly denounced on all sides. It is declared that the power in holding Moslem rule by force of arms have made a melancholy and degraded spectacle that Greece will never forget. LONDON, Feb. 22.—The Daily News correspondent at Canea, telegraphically detailed account of the fighting at, and abandonment of, Fort Voukots, which the Christians subsequently blew up with dynamite. The Moslems took 50 killed in the fighting. After the main body of Greek troops had retreated to Paltan, from Voukots the news arrived that 500 Turks and 500 Bashi Bazoos were attempting to advance from Canea, and that they were held in check by a force of 200 Cretons. Col. Vassos sent a battalion of infantry and a company of Chassés to assist the Cretons. The country was difficult to traverse, being heavily wooded, but the Greeks managed to get through. The Turks, when they learned of the approach of the reinforcements, fled to the mountains on the heights, and for three hours made a desperate defense. The Greek troops were all young men who had never seen service, but they fought with admirable courage. They drove the Turks from one position to another, and captured the towers of Ayah and Monkunda, and the barracks at Livadia, which they burned. The Moslems retreated, taking with them three cannons. The Greeks pursued them to within a mile of Canea, and then retired to Paltan. The loss of the Turks is unknown, but many of them were taken into Canea. The Greeks suffered severely. Three officers and 100 men and one officer were severely wounded. The Athenian students corps fought beside the Greeks, and were very brave.
